

Layla S.L Smith

Apollo

Mrs. Goodrich

March 2019

References

203 Best Senegalese Proverb Quotes Images,

quotescovers.com/topics/Senegalese%20proverb/page/4.

This site consisted of many different quotes and sayings that are used within Senegal culture.

This site inspired and helped develop the lines and the three perspectives of the three-exposure poem I have written.

Commonwealth Office. "Local Laws and Customs - Senegal Travel Advice." GOV.UK,

GOV.UK, 7 Mar. 2019,

www.gov.uk/foreign-travel-advice/senegal/local-laws-and-customs.

This article gave information about the laws and customs of Senegal, West Africa. From the correct dress apparel that should be worn at public events, to the acceptable greetings when meeting others, this information was geared towards those who would like to travel to Senegal.

This article provided the knowledge I needed in in order to make a thorough analysis of present day Senegal culture and how it has changed in the last two centuries due to French ruling (during and after 1800's) and influence.

“Home.” Senegal - Language, Culture, Customs and Etiquette, www.commisceo-global.com/resources/country-guides/senegal-guide.

This source went into depth about the society and culture of Senegal. Tribal and ethnic diversity, greetings and religion, are just some of the aspects focussed on throughout this “guide” of Senegal.

This source prompted me to do more research on specific aspects of life in Senegal that were impacted by French ruling and influence. For example, on this online guide presented by Commisceo Global, the different languages within different areas of Senegal were described. I then decided to conduct more research on the major languages of the country and if and how they intertwined with the French language.

“News.” A Look at Senegal's Culture and Economy, www.childfund.org/senegal-culture-and-economy/.

This site provided information on the economy and culture of Senegal. Children's issues within the country were also addressed.

Although not all of the information from this site was used within the overall Apollo project, the facts given about the economy of Senegal helped to support my analysis of how the country has developed economically since gaining independence from France.

Searcey, Dionne. “Across Senegal, the Beloved Baobab Tree Is the 'Pride of the Neighborhood'.”

The New York Times, The New York Times, 30 Sept. 2018, www.nytimes.com/2018/09/30/world/africa/senegal-baobabs-climate-change.html.

This article explores how baobabs trees found within Senegal are essential cultural symbols. The author, Dionne Searcey, also described how these beloved trees are increasingly threatened by climate change, urbanization and growing population.

This article provided interesting, although not essential information, about a national symbol of Senegal that I incorporated within the three-exposure poem I created; this poem showcased the culture and society of the country.

“Senegal Profile - Timeline.” BBC News, BBC, 14 May 2018, www.bbc.com/news/world-africa-14093813.

This source consisted of a timeline of the development of Senegal. Starting from the 8th century when present-day Senegal was part of the Kingdom of Ghana, to when the country gained its independence in 1960, many economical, environmental and social events were covered.

This source provided information I needed to create an accurate time period of each of the three perspectives that are within the three-exposure poem I created.

Stop Over - Documentary, Discovery. “SENEGAL (Documentary, Discovery, History).”

YouTube, YouTube, 28 July 2015, www.youtube.com/watch?v=IMv75BKmMsQ.

This video source explored the different cities and regions within Senegal and how they have been impacted by economic and social change over the past few centuries.

This video source provided information I needed to complete a thorough analysis of present day Senegal and how the people of the country have adapted through all of this economic and social change after gaining independence from France.

“Women's Rights in Senegal | The Borgen Project | Women's Rights.” The Borgen Project, 5

Dec. 2018,

borgenproject.org/what-is-being-done-and-needs-to-be-done-to-improve-womens-rights-in-senegal/.

This site goes into depth about women’s rights in Senegal and how improvements have been made over the last few decades to involve women of the country in political and social matters.

This site provided information I needed to create an accurate perspective of a women’s life in present day Senegal and during French ruling in the 1800’s.